- Actual transaction exchange rate at the transaction date is the average transfer buying and selling rate of the commercial bank where the Company regularly conducts transactions. This rate may be determined daily, weekly, or monthly based on the average of daily transfer buying and selling rates quoted by the bank.
- Weighted average book exchange rate is determined based on the weighted average between the translated value in the accounting currency using actual transaction exchange rates for: Debit side of cash, receivables, and other assets; or Credit side of payables divided by the foreign currency balance at the beginning of the period plus increases during the period for each item.

This rate may be determined at the end of the period or at each settlement date.

At the end of the fiscal year, monetary items denominated in foreign currencies, including assets (cash, receivables, and other monetary assets) and liabilities (borrowings, payables, and other obligations), are translated at the average transfer buying and selling exchange rates of the commercial bank where the Company regularly conducts transactions at the reporting date.

All realized foreign exchange differences arising during the year and unrealized exchange differences upon year-end revaluation are recognized in the income statement for the financial year.

2. Principles for Recognition of Cash and Cash Equivalents

11. Principles for Recognition of Owner's Equity

Owner's contributed capital is recorded at the actual amount contributed.

Undistributed post-tax profits represent the profits from business activities after adjustments for retrospective changes in accounting policies and corrections of material errors from prior years..

NOTES TO THE FINANCIAL STATEMENTS (CONTINUED)12. Principles and Methods for Revenue Recognition

Revenue from the sale of goods is recognized when all the following conditions are met:

- The significant risks and rewards of ownership have been transferred to the buyer.
- The Company no longer retains control over the goods.
- Revenue is reliably measurable.
- It is probable that economic benefits will flow to the Company.
- Costs incurred can be reliably measured.

Revenue from services is recognized when the outcome can be reliably estimated. For multi-period services, revenue is recognized based on the proportion of work completed as of the reporting date.

Financial income (e.g., interest, royalties, dividends) is recognized when:

- It is probable that economic benefits will flow to the Company.
- The revenue amount can be reliably measured.

Dividends and profits are recognized when the right to receive payment is established.

13. Principles for Recognition of Cost of Sales

The cost of goods sold reflects the value of products, goods, and services sold during the period. The provision for inventory devaluation is recognized in cost of goods sold based on the quantity of inventories and the excess of cost over net realizable value where the latter is lower than the former.

In determining the volume of inventories subject to write-down and requiring a provision, the Company excludes inventories that have been committed under sales contracts (with net realizable value not lower than their carrying amount) but have not yet been delivered to customers, provided there is sufficient evidence that customers will not cancel the contracts

14. Principles for Recognition of Financial Expenses

Financial expenses include:

- Costs or losses related to financial investments.
- Borrowing costs.
- Losses from foreign exchange fluctuations.
- Provisions for devaluation of investment securities.

These are recorded on a gross basis without offsetting against financial income

15. Principles for Selling and Administrative Expenses

- Selling expenses include costs directly incurred in selling goods and services, such as advertising, commissions, warranty, and transportation costs.
- Administrative expenses include general management costs, such as salaries for management staff, insurance, office supplies, and other administrative costs

16. Principles for Corporate Income Tax (CIT)

Current CIT is calculated based on taxable income and the applicable CIT rate for the year.

Deferred CIT is determined based on temporary differences and the applicable tax rate.
