IV. ACCOUNTING POLICIES APPLIED

1. Types of exchange rates applied in accounting

The company converts foreign currencies into Vietnamese Dong based on the actual transaction exchange rate and the exchange rate recorded in the accounting books .

Principles for determining the actual exchange rate.

All foreign currency transactions arising during the period (buying and selling foreign currency, contributing or receiving capital contributions, recording accounts receivable and payable, asset purchases or expenses paid immediately in foreign currency) are accounted for at the actual exchange rate at the time the transaction occurs.

The ending balances of monetary items (cash, cash equivalents , receivables, and payables) denominated in foreign currencies are revalued at the actual exchange rate published as of June 30, 2026 :

- The actual exchange rate used when re -evaluating monetary items denominated in foreign currencies and classified as assets: the average foreign exchange buying and selling rate for transfers of the banks where the Company has accounts will be applied.
- The actual exchange rate used when re - evaluating monetary items denominated in foreign currencies classified as liabilities: the average foreign exchange buying and selling rate for transfers of the banks where the Company has accounts will be applied.

Principles for determining the exchange rate used in accounting records.

When collecting accounts receivable, deposits , collateral, or making payments of accounts payable in foreign currency, the Company uses the actual book exchange rate .

When making payments in foreign currency, the Company uses the moving weighted average book exchange rate .

2. Principles for recognizing cash and cash equivalents

Cash in hand, demand deposits, and cash in transit include: Vietnamese currency, foreign currency, and monetary gold used as a store of value, excluding gold classified as inventory.

equivalents include time deposits and short - term investments with an original term of no more than three months, which are highly liquid, easily convertible into specific amounts of cash , and do not carry significant conversion risk .

3. Principles for recognizing trade receivables and other receivables.

Principle for recognizing accounts receivable : at cost minus provisions for doubtful accounts receivable . demand .

The classification of receivables as customer receivables and other receivables depends on the nature of the transaction or the relationship between the Company and the debtor.

The method of establishing a reserve fund is difficult . Provision for doubtful receivables is estimated for the lost value of accounts receivable and other investments held to maturity that are of a similar nature to uncollectible receivables that are overdue , not overdue but may be uncollectible due to the debtor's inability to pay because of bankruptcy, dissolution proceedings, disappearance, or absconding.

Principles for establishing provisions for doubtful receivables : according to the guidelines in Circular No. 48/2019/TT-BTC dated August 8, 2019, of the Ministry of Finance, "Guidelines on the establishment and handling of provisions for inventory devaluation, investment losses, doubtful receivables, and product, goods, and construction warranty at enterprises".

Principles of Inventory Recognition

Inventory Recognition Principle : Inventory is recognized at cost (-) minus provisions for impairment and provisions for obsolete or defective inventory. The cost of inventory includes the purchase cost, processing costs, and other directly related costs incurred to bring the inventory to its current location and condition.

Inventory valuation method : Weighted average cost per month.

Inventory accounting method : Perpetual inventory method.

Methods for establishing provisions for inventory devaluation: Provisions for inventory devaluation are established when the net realizable value of the inventory is less than its original cost. The net realizable value is the selling price excluding depreciation. The cost of completing the product is calculated based on the estimated cost of goods sold. The provision for inventory devaluation is the difference between the original cost of inventory and its net realizable value.

Methods for creating provisions for inventory devaluation: In accordance with the guidelines in Circular No. 48/2019/TT-BTC dated August 8, 2019, of the Ministry of Finance, "Guidelines on the establishment and handling of provisions for inventory devaluation, investment losses, uncollectible receivables, and product, goods, and construction warranty at enterprises".

Principles for recognizing and depreciating fixed assets.

3.1 Principles for recognizing tangible fixed assets

Tangible fixed assets are recognized at their original cost minus accumulated depreciation. Original cost is the total cost incurred by the enterprise to acquire the fixed asset up to the point it is ready for use as intended. Costs incurred after initial recognition are only added to the original cost of the fixed asset if these costs are certain to increase future economic benefits from the use of the asset. Costs that do not meet this condition are recognized as expenses in the current period.

fixed asset is sold or disposed of, its original cost and accumulated depreciation are written off, and any gains or losses arising from the disposal are recognized as income or expense in the period.

Tangible fixed assets purchased fixed asset includes the purchase price (minus any trade discounts or price reductions), taxes (excluding refundable taxes), and costs directly related to bringing the asset into a ready-to-use condition, such as installation, commissioning, expert fees, and other directly related costs.

3.2 Principles for recognizing intangible fixed assets

THIRD QUARTER FINANCIAL REPORT

Ends September 30, 2026

Notes to the Financial Statements (next)

Intangible fixed assets are recorded at their original cost minus (-) accumulated depreciation. The original cost of an intangible fixed asset is the total cost incurred by the enterprise to acquire the intangible fixed asset up to the time it is put into intended use.

The Company's intangible fixed assets include:

Mining rights

Mining rights encompass all the costs incurred by the Company to acquire the right to mine the stone quarry.

Quality Management System Certification (ISO)

Quality management system certification encompasses all the costs incurred by a company to obtain the quality management system certificate.

5.3 Methods of Depreciation of Fixed Assets

Fixed assets are depreciated using the straight-line method based on the estimated useful life of the asset. The estimated useful life is the period during which the asset is effective for production and business operations.

The estimated useful life of fixed assets is as follows:

Factory buildings, structures	5 - 30 years
Machinery and equipment	4 - 15 years
Transportation and transmission	3 - 12 years
Mining rights	20 years
Quality Management System Certification (ISO)	6 years
Other fixed assets	4 years

6. Principles for recording work-in-progress construction costs.

Basic construction costs are recorded at cost. These costs include: the cost of purchasing new materials and equipment. Design , basic construction , repair, periodic maintenance, upgrading, and renovation of fixed assets.

These costs are transferred and recorded as an increase in assets when the project is completed and the overall acceptance is finalized . The project has been completed , the assets have been handed over and Put it into a ready - to - use state.

7. Principles for recognizing deferred expenses

Deferred expenses are recognized when actual expenses have been incurred but relate to the business results of multiple periods. The main principles include: gradual allocation to production and business expenses over the period of use, adherence to the matching principle, and detailed tracking of each item.

Method of allocating prepaid expenses: Prepaid expenses are calculated and allocated to the cost of production and business operations each period using the straight-line method. Based on the nature and extent of each type of expense, the allocation period is as follows: short-term prepaid expenses are allocated within 12 months; long-term prepaid expenses are allocated from 13 months to 36 months.

8. Principles for recognizing payables to suppliers.

Accounts payable to suppliers are recognized based on actual payment obligations to suppliers, categorized in detail by item, term (short/long term), and original currency. Recognition follows the prudence principle, fully reflecting discounts, rebates, and revaluation of exchange rate differences at the end of the period for foreign currency principal liabilities.

9. Principles for recognizing payable expenses

Accrued expenses include amounts payable for goods and services that the Company has received from sellers or provided to buyers during the reporting period but has not actually paid due to the lack of invoices or insufficient accounting records. These are recorded as production and business expenses of the reporting period, such as: freight charges; interest expenses; and other service fees.

10. Principles for recognizing and capitalizing borrowing costs.

Principles for recognizing borrowing costs: Interest on loans and other expenses directly related to a company's borrowings are recognized as production and business expenses in the period, unless these expenses arise from loans directly related to the investment in construction or production of work-in-progress assets, which are included in the value of those assets (capitalized) when the conditions stipulated in Accounting Standard No. 16 "Borrowing Costs" are met.

11. Principles for recognizing equity

Principles for recording owner's investment capital: Business capital is formed from the amount of money contributed by shareholders to purchase shares or stocks, or supplemented from after-tax profits according to the Resolution of the General Meeting of Shareholders. Business capital is recorded at the actual amount of capital contributed in cash or in assets calculated at the par value of the shares issued at the time of establishment, or additional capital raised to expand the company's operations.

Share premium: recognized as the difference (greater or smaller) between the actual issuance value and the par value of shares when issuing shares for the first time, issuing additional shares, or reissuing treasury shares.

Principle for recognizing undistributed profits: They are recognized as the profit (or loss) from the business operations of the enterprise after deducting (-) corporate income tax expenses for the current period and adjustments due to the retrospective application of changes in accounting policies and retrospective adjustments for material errors from previous years.

The distribution of after-tax profits is governed by the Company's Articles of Association and approved by the General Meeting of Shareholders.

12. Principles and methods of revenue recognition

Notes to the Financial Statements (next)Principles and methods for recognizing sales revenue.

Sales revenue is recognized when the following five conditions are simultaneously met: 1. The company has transferred the majority of the risks and benefits associated with ownership of the product or goods to the buyer; 2. The company no longer retains the right to manage or control the goods as the owner; 3. The revenue is determined with reasonable certainty. When the contract stipulates that the buyer has the right to return the purchased product or goods under specific conditions, the company may only recognize revenue when those specific conditions no longer exist and the buyer no longer has the right to return the product or goods (except in the case of exchange for other goods or services); 4. The company has or will obtain economic benefits from the sales transaction; 5. The costs related to the sales transaction can be determined.

Principles and methods for recognizing financial income .

Financial income is recognized when it simultaneously satisfies the two revenue recognition conditions stipulated in Accounting Standard No. 14 - Revenue and Other Income , including: interest on bank deposits recognized on the basis of the bank's monthly interest notification and interest from exchange rate differences.

13. Principles and methods for recording the cost of goods sold.

Cost of goods sold reflects the cost of goods sold; the production cost of finished products sold during the period. Cost of goods sold is recognized at the time the transaction occurs or when there is a relatively certain likelihood that it will occur in the future, regardless of whether payment has been made or not. The cost of goods sold and the revenue it generates are recognized simultaneously according to the matching principle .

14. Principles and methods for recognizing financial expenses.

Expenses recognized as financial expenses include: interest expense on loans, interest on deferred payment purchases, exchange rate losses arising during the period, and exchange rate losses due to the revaluation of monetary items at the end of the accounting period .

These amounts are recorded based on the total amount generated during the period and are not offset against financial income.

15. Accounting principles for selling expenses and administrative expenses.

Selling expenses reflect the actual costs incurred in the process of selling products, goods, or providing services, including costs of offering products, introducing products, advertising products, sales commissions, product warranty costs (excluding construction activities), storage, packaging, and transportation costs, etc.

Business management expenses reflect the general management costs of a business, including: salaries for management staff (wages, allowances, etc.); social insurance, health insurance, union fees, and unemployment insurance for management staff; office supplies, tools, and depreciation of fixed assets used for business management; land rent and business license tax; provisions for doubtful receivables; outsourced services (electricity , water, telephone, fax, property insurance, fire insurance, etc.); and other cash expenses (entertainment, customer conferences, etc.).

expenses and administrative expenses that have been recorded but are not considered deductible expenses when calculating corporate income tax according to the Tax Law, but have complete invoices and supporting documents, should not be recorded as a reduction in accounting expenses but only adjusted in the corporate income tax return to increase the amount of corporate income tax payable.

16. Current principles and methods for recording corporate income tax expenses.

Corporate income tax expense is determined by encompassing both current and deferred corporate income tax expenses when determining the profit or loss for an accounting period.

Current corporate income tax expense: This is the amount of corporate income tax payable (or recoverable) calculated on taxable income and the corporate income tax rate for the current year as recorded under the current corporate income tax law.

Taxes payable to the state budget will be specifically settled with the tax authorities. Any difference between the tax payable according to the books and the audited tax settlement figures will be adjusted upon official settlement with the tax authorities.

17. Principles for recognizing earnings per share and diluted earnings per share.

Earnings per share are calculated by taking the profit or loss attributable to shareholders holding common stock of the Company, after deducting the portion of the Bonus and Welfare Fund set aside during the period, and dividing it by the weighted average number of common shares outstanding during the period.

Dilutive earnings per share are calculated by dividing the after-tax profit or loss attributable to shareholders holding common stock of the Company (after adjusting for dividends on convertible preferred stock) by the weighted average number of common shares outstanding during the period and the weighted average number of common shares that would be issued if all potentially dilutive common shares were converted into common stock.

18. Stakeholders

Related parties are businesses or individuals who, directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, have control over or are under the control of the Company. Associates, individuals who directly or indirectly hold voting rights and have significant influence over the Company, key management positions such as the Board of Directors, the Management Board, close family members of individuals or associates, or companies affiliated with such individuals are also considered related parties. In considering each relationship between related parties, the nature of the relationship is taken into account, not its legal form.

19. Other accounting principles and methods

Value Added Tax (VAT): The company pays VAT using the deduction method. The applicable VAT rate is 10% for goods sold domestically and 0% for exported goods.

Other taxes and fees are implemented in accordance with the current tax and fee regulations of the State.
